THE RACETRACK

HOW THE HORSES RAN IN BROOKLYN.

THREE FIRST CHOICES WERE SUCCESSFUL After to-day the gates of the Brooklyn track will shut until 1839, and it might do no harm to the highest interests of the best sport were they never to be reopened. No one knows now at what date streets will be laid out through the grounds and will stop at this well-known course. the change comes the better it will be victims of the betting-ring. Every betting-ring a prolific source of trouble, misery and wrong. and every racetrack which is not so managed as to suppress sharp practice and cheating is an n to the county and the State in which erfere with the wicked devices of men who star for work, and who are determined to get oney out of the turf no matter how reprehensib be the methods by which they get the money intense and so insatiable has been the passion on the part of the central powers at this track to lay hold of every cent which could be applied to dividends on the stock, that the reputation of the at for broad views, for liberal dealings the starting of horses for work, and with often cheap and common and crude and coarse. this track at certain times, some have been found verage of New-Yorkers in intelligence and energy. tion and force do not, of course, interfere with the inning of horses for work, which has always on so extensively at Brooklyn, and they are not keen enough to detect the frequent dishones nemes which are devised and put into effect, or else they prefer that racing shall be unclean rather

So much that is objectionable and wrong has been allowed to occur unchecked at Brooklyn this year and in previous years, and so little desire to deal generously with the public has been shown, that the ending of the meeting to-day is welcome and acceptable, and the coming of the time when the land shall be cut up into building lots and the bookmaker shall be banished irrevocably will be greeted with satisfaction by hosts of upright and orable citizens. This State and this city ought to tolerate the existence of racetracks when those tracks permit evil-doers to prey upon un-uspecting dupes and victims in bettting-rings, and permit certain disreputable owners, trainers, 1 cokand jockeys to cheat the public by starting orses for work, and by many other Satanic deover the sport with repreach and coneather at this meeting. Had the stewardship worthy of praise as the weather on most weather at this meeting. Had the stewardship been as worthy of praise as the weather on most of the racing afternoons, the track might have strengthened itself in the goodwill of high-minised friends of the thoroughbreds. But the stewardship on several occasions has been as cloudy as the weather has been clear. In several cases in which that been the urgent duty of the stewards to to target the track of the stewards to act vigorously and in stark earnest, they have been too careless, too timid or too indolent to act at at too careless, too timid or too indolent to act at all. Therefore, it has been a meeting wofully marred, a meeting of mournful mishaps and mischances, a meeting blurred and botched and bungled and spoiled. It is a good thing that it will be over to-day.

There were no races of striking importance yesterday. Maher did not ride on account of his fall on Tuesday, but he will soon be at work again. In the third race La Penitente became so lame after her warming-up sailop that she was withdrawn beton the filly, because her backers got no ride for their bets; but most of the bookmakers refused to return anything. In this State the tracks nominally debline to recognize betting, although each track gets a revenue from the betting-ring in one way or another. The Metropolitan Turf Association has a rule that no money bet on a horse whose number and jockey are put up on the official board shall be returned, no matter what may happen.

shall be returned, no matter what has the proceedingly anary when most of the bookmakers refused to return the La Pentiente bets.

Doggett did not have a mount yesterday. The Doggett did not have a mount yesterday. The turf is better off when this jockey has no mounts. Every turfman who knows anything about riding and anything about Doggett's record and career knows why the turf is better off when this rider has no mounts. Doggett has ridden Sir Walter in many races. Study all the races in which he has ridden Sir Walter and you will find that Sir Walter, when this boy has ridden him, has been one of the most inconsistent, in and out horses ever known. Doggett did not ride Sir Walter vesterday, and Sir Walter wen the fourth race. Doggett has ridden some queer races on Whiplash. He did not ride whiplash yesterday, and she won the second race very easily. Did the stewards of the Jockey Cubever bestow patient and thorough study upon Doggett's many peculiar rides? It has been their plain duty for a ong time to study Doggett's rides. If they have not done it, they have neglected their plain duty. They grant license of any jockey whose riding is such that he does not deserve to keep his license.

William Martin rode vesterday for the first time since his leg was injured in a race. He is still lame, however He handled irish Reel in the second race. Irish Reel was so much superior to Clonsilla, the only other starter, that the affair was a practical walkever for Irish Reel, on whom the odds of 20 to I were laid.

Clawson rode George Keene well on Tuesday.

he defeated Macy, White Frost and Whist Clawson rode George Keene well on Tuesday, when he defeated Macy. White Frost and Whistling Con The betting was then four to one against George Keene. Vesterday Clawson was again on George Keene, who was the favorite in the fourth race. George Keene was leading the field so ensity at the head of the homestretch that he seemed to be a sure winner. Just at that point a strange thing occurred. George Keene was in the lead and moving easily, while Sir Walter, the second horse, was under the whip. Suddenly George Keene lost ground, and Sir Walter passed him in the fraction of a second. What caused George Keene to Jose ground so suddenly? No other horse was near him at that point. He did not stumble. What was Clawson doing to him just then and there? The horse was clear and moving smoothly. He did not act as if he had been struck with a fit of sulking with the suddenness of a stroke of lightning. Of course, the stewards asked no questions as to the startling suddenness with which the favorite lost his speed. What care they about these things? Without betting-rings there would be no racing in this State. Without bookmakers there would be no betting-rings as matters are now. Without frequent defeats of favorites are now. Without frequent defeats of favorites are now. Without frequent defeats of favorites no matter how those defeats are brought about—there would be few bookmakers to pay money for gambling privileges. Without racetracks there would be no ornamental, decorative and useless racetrack stewards.

Some day the people of this State may grow wise enough to abolish swindling betting-rings gambling racetracks. And even elegant and exquisite race-

NOTES FROM A VETERAN TRAINER. COMMENTS AS TO HORSES AND HORSEMEN.

Daniel Maher, the jockey, who was injured by he ing thrown while riding Captain Sigsbee on Tues-day, is rapidly recovering from the shock and the oruless which he received, and is likely to be seen in the saddle on Saturday at Morris Park. Edward Jones had a narrow escape at Gravesend yesterday. He had the mount on Sir Gawain in the fourth race. On turning into the backstretch Sir Gawain broke down, and fifty yards further on crossed his legs and fell against the fence with aufficient force to break his shoulder. Jones was thrown heavily, but fortunately escaped hitting one of the posts. He was badly shaken up, but recovered in a few minutes and was able to ride

Short Story of Tables.

IKE any good short story, this has rapid action, a well defined purpose and a pleasant ending. There are three hundred of these tables. There were four hundred vesterday morning, but one-fourth went during the day, although they had arrived unheralded and remained unsung. You can imagine how long the rest will last, now that they have received the publicity they deserve.

Parior Tables and Library Tables, princi pally, with some sweetening of Palm Stands Tabourettes and Piano Benches. All kinds. from the work-a-day bench of the writer or student, to the strictly ornamental pieces for what you might call "spectacular" use.

FOOTBALL.

AGAINST "TRIAL-HORSE" TEAMS.

Philadelphia, Sept. 28 (Special).—Pennsylvania's football team defeated Gettysburg to-day on Franklin Field by the score of 50 to 0. The score at the end of the first half was 28 to 0. The day was rather warm for fast playing, yet both teams played with a good deal of snap for so early in the season. Pennsylvania played many substitutes, and consequently their team work was not what it should have been. Hare, Overfield and Folwell, of the regular team, took a rest, and their places were taken by McMahon, Reugenberg and Snover These three gave a good account of themselves, and are
